Maxinism — Political and Moral Ideology

I. POLITICAL STRUCTURE

The Executive Council (EC) is the collegiate governing body, without a single head of state.
It is composed of representatives elected by department every 7 years.
Each municipality elects its mayor by universal suffrage.
Once the elections are over, all mayors of a department meet to form the Departmental Council, which elects the department's representative to sit on the Executive Council (EC).
Thus, each department has equal representation in the national government.

The Ethics Council (ECt), independent, ensures transparency, integrity, and morality of institutions.
Both bodies are subject to the same laws and obligations as citizens.

II. SOCIETY AND RIGHTS

- Freedom of expression is guaranteed, except for attacks against national symbols.
- Absolute equality among all citizens, including leaders.
- Demonstrations are only allowed with prefectural approval.
- Dual nationality is prohibited.
- Immigration is strictly controlled, with national citizens given priority.
- No social aid, allowance, or subsidy is granted to people without nationality.

III. ECONOMY AND SOCIAL JUSTICE

- The state controls monetary stability to prevent inflation.
- Progressive taxation based on individual income.
- Pension system based on earned salary: the higher the income, the higher the pension.
- Prices in supermarkets, medical care, and certain public services are indexed to income.
- Freedom of enterprise is guaranteed but regulated by morality and collective interest.
- National priority is given to exports and protecting the domestic economy.

IV. WORK AND EMPLOYMENT

- Unemployment is abolished.
- Every unemployed person is assigned public work by the state, adapted to their abilities and national needs.
- These public jobs contribute to maintenance, construction, environment, or state logistics support.
- Work is considered a civic duty and a form of participation in common prosperity.

V. JUSTICE AND SECURITY

- Justice is shared between judges and citizens.
- The EC ensures national defense and security.
- Foreign prisoners are expelled to preserve national resources.
- Public order is a cardinal value of Maxinism.

VI. TERRITORIAL ORGANIZATION

- Each municipality elects its mayor, supervised by the EC and ECt.
- Mayors form departmental councils, can propose local laws, and elect their national representative.
- These local laws must be validated by the EC to come into effect.

VII. DIPLOMACY AND PHILOSOPHY

- Maxinism is sovereign but peaceful.
- Maxinism rejects any alliance based on war ambitions or the desire to destroy an innocent people.
- The Maxinist homeland engages only in commercial and peaceful partnerships, aiming for mutual progress and ethical prosperity.
- The nation remains neutral toward international organizations unless their actions fully respect the sovereignty of peoples and universal moral principles.
- Three fundamental pillars: National Security, Social Justice, Ethical Prosperity.

VIII. EDUCATION

Maxinist schools aim to prepare citizens for adult life from an early age.
They teach the fundamental principles of Maxinism and the values of the homeland.
National and world history, to understand the roots and lessons of the past.
Civic, moral, and ethical education, to form responsible and virtuous citizens.
The functioning of institutions, so that each student understands the role of the State, the Executive Council (EC), the Ethics Council (ECt), and local democracy.
Education is a pillar of moral and political stability. It aims to create enlightened, engaged citizens worthy of serving the nation.

IX. IDEOLOGICAL POSITIONING

- Economy: pragmatic center-left.
- Society: moral and responsible center-right.
- Philosophy: humanist and ethical.
  Maxinism represents a balance between authority, freedom, and justice.

X. OBJECTIVE

To create a sustainable, just, and moral political model, where everyone participates in collective prosperity and virtue guides public power.
Maxinism seeks to unite strength, reason, and virtue to build a stable, sovereign, and fair future.
